William Wiman Brinton Proprietor

Bill Brinton resides in Sonoma, but his roots are deep in the Midwest. Midwesterners are known for strong American values, respect for family and institutions, and the ability to create and recognize value in products.

Bill is a direct descendent of a true pioneer, John Deere. His direct family was at the helm of Deere until its recent transition to a public company. Deere created the self-scouring steel plow, an invention that revolutionized the agricultural world. It is this spirit of innovation and tradition that Bill brings to the company he founded, Charles Creek Vineyard. Charles Creek is named after his son Charley and his grandfather, Charles Deere Wiman.

In 1993, Bill, a graduate of the Columbia University MBA program, established a natural products and nutritional beverage firm, The Wiman Beverage Company. This company was sold to a larger firm in 2000.

Bill enjoys vineyard selection and development, as well as the critical evaluation and blending of the juice from grapes into wine. The wines are styled to pair wonderfully with a wide variety of fresh foods, and his vision is to create wines that could be sold for $40 to $50 per bottle, but that provide an exceptional value in the $20 to $25 price range. Value and integrity are the cornerstones of Midwestern values, and the basis upon which Charles Creek Vineyard was founded.

Geraldine Brinton

Proprietor

Gerry has always had a very strong connection with the land.

Born and raised in Dubuque, Iowa, Gerry spent many mornings picking raspberries outside her kitchen door, and many afternoons helping her grandmother weed the vegetable garden, picking currants, gooseberries, apples and even grapes as they ripened into the fall.

Gerry was educated in North Carolina at Duke University and Boston and settled in San Francisco with her husband, Bill. However, the lure of a more rural lifestyle brought them to Sonoma County to set up as an alternative location in which to foster the same respect and love for the land, and the values it promotes, in their two young sons. Over the years, their garden in Sonoma provided more and more harvests for their table. As their boys grew up and moved away, Gerry & Bill found they could shift their primary focus to their Sonoma home. That same garden is the basis of many a delicious and healthful meal that is complemented by the wines of Charles Creek Vineyard.

Somewhere along the way it occurred to them to follow the lead of many others, and plant their property to vine. The success of early harvests spurred them on to expand that part of their dream to produce exceptional wine at a reasonable price. Gerry has worked in many capacities over the years, CPA, management consultant, property manager, principal in a fresh juice company, and volunteer director for a major medical center. Her goal has always been to work on projects that she believes in: ones that she can ethically and whole-heartedly support. The latest of these, Charles Creek Vineyard, meets these criteria. The best fruit from the best land, well cared for and handled properly, can yield wonderful wines, and that is the goal of this part of the adventure.

Kerry Damskey Winemaker

Internationally recognized winemaker Kerry Damskey has 25 years of winemaking experience, spanning four continents. He has spent his career gaining a better understanding of the entire ecology of wine, including the impact of climate, soil, sun exposure, and temperature on the grape growing and winemaking processes. Damskey brings both expertise and perspective to Charles Creek Vineyard. Like Andre Tchelistcheff, who Damskey worked with in the early 1970s, Kerry also believes that wine is made in the vineyards; furthermore, it is a winemaker's responsibility to artistically deliver what that terroir brings forth.

Graduated from U.C. Davis in 1976, with a B.S. degree in fermentation science, Damskey is also a graduate of an intense, small business program at Stanford University School of Business, and is a candidate of the Institute of the Masters of Wine.

In his early winemaking career, Damskey served as a wine judge for many wine competitions. "This experience," says Kerry, "helped me to define what's great about a wine and what's not, what has style and what doesn't. Then, I took that understanding into the vineyards. Being able to understand the flavors of viticulture's regional styles helped me to create expressive, stylist wines for each region that I've worked with."

Damskey talents have been twice honored with a "Sweepstake Awards" in the Sonoma County Wine Competition; additionally, Damskey has received numerous other "Best of Class" and "Gold" medals for his wines, many of which have been achieved for Charles Creek Vineyard wines.

VINEYARD

Vineyard

1 Hyde Vineyards, Carneros / Napa

Characteristics

Located in the Carneros Region of Napa between Highway 12 and Old Sonoma Road, this is a relatively warm region, because it is further from the cool fog and wind of San Francisco Bay. It also has good elevation above sea level making the soils lighter in clay with better drainage.
Merlot and Chardonnay

Producers

Paul Hobbs, Kistler, Ramey, Patz & Hall

2 Sangiacomo Vineyards, Carneros / Sonoma

Located in the Carneros region of Sonoma and consistently celebrated for so many award-winning wines. Soils are gravelly, riparian clay loam, characteristic of finer vineyards in Carneros region. Breezy, cool conditions from San Pablo Bay, make this an ideal growing area for cool climate grapes like Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, and certain Merlot clones. Chardonnay and Merlot

Ravenswood, Flowers, Merryvale, Steele, Gundlach Bundschu, Chateau Souverain, Whitehall Lane, Carmenet, Saintsbury, Bouchaine, Rombauer, Mantanzas Creek

3 Mountain Terraces Vineyard, Sonoma Valley

Located near the Napa County border, this Sonoma Valley property is situated atop the Mayacamas Mountain Range, just south of Mount Veeder, at an elevation of 1800 feet. Because of its mountainous conditions, the site yields very small, intensely flavored fruit of exceptional quality and character.
Cabernet Sauvignon

Arrowood, Pahlmeyer, Ledson, Kunde, Gundlach Bundschu

4 Stagecoach Vineyard, Napa Valley

The over six-hundred thousand vines are planted among rock and chaparral encompassing an area in excess of twelve hundred acres. Stagecoach vineyard adjoins the Oakville appellation at an elevation of nine hundred feet and climb above Oakville, rising to over seventeen hundred feet. The metamorphosis of scrub brush into vineyards of distinctive Napa Valley terroir has garnered both admiration and a prestigious list of client wineries.
Cabernet Sauvignon

Miner, Honig, Verasion, Stonehedge, Rutherford Hill, Erich Russell Conn Creek, Paul Hobbs, Pepi, Selby, Ruston, Rutherford Ranch
